MISSION

The Fleishman Center for Career and Professional Development helps students understand themselves in relation to the world of work and develop the skills and competencies needed for career success in a global economy. A range of services, programs, events and resources are offered to facilitate learning and practice, as well as transitions and connections to professional employment and advanced study.

WHO DOES IT SERVE?

Undergraduate and graduate students in all Binghamton University schools and departments are eligible to use services. Alumni may also access many resources. The Career Center assists employers in meeting professional full-time, part-time and internship staffing needs.

WHAT DOES IT OFFER?

Regardless of school or college, class year or major, the Career Center assists both undergraduate and graduate students with:

- Choosing a major program of study
- Exploring career paths
- Understanding and accessing current and accurate information about occupations, the labor market, internship and job openings, international opportunities and advanced study
- Assessing skills, interests, values and experiences
- Identifying and securing opportunities to gain experience through internships and related activities
- Learning about the recruitment process and conducting a successful job search
- Understanding how to effectively present themselves in a résumé or curriculum vita, cover letter, or interview and conduct themselves in a professional manner
- Connecting with employers for internships and jobs
- Networking with alumni and other professionals
- Using social media in a professional manner for networking and job/internship searching
- Clarifying graduate/professional school goals, researching programs and understanding the application process
