The Center for Israel Studies and the Middle East and North Africa Program at Binghamton University present:

What is “Fair”? The Challenges of Reporting on Israel/Palestine

A public lecture by Christa Case Bryant of The Christian Science Monitor

Christa Case Bryant was the Jerusalem bureau chief of The Christian Science Monitor from 2012 to 2015, and is currently a Nieman Journalism Fellow at Harvard University. Prior to her work in Jerusalem, she was the Middle East editor for the news outlet, including during the seminal events of the Arab Spring.

At this event, Christa Case Bryant will discuss her experiences in Israel, the West Bank, and Gaza, with particular focus on the challenges inherent in reporting on contentious issues in contested spaces. The presentation will be followed by a question-and-answer session.

December 7, 2015, 4:00-5:30 PM
Science II, Room 145

Sponsored by the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) Program and the Center for Israel Studies (CIS) at Binghamton University