Call for Proposals from Affiliated Faculty

Deadline for Submissions: February 15, 2016
Announcements of Funding: February 29, 2016

You are invited to submit a proposal for one of two possible opportunities or a mixture of the two.

1. A one to two days closed multidisciplinary seminar in one of the TAE research theme areas (Movement, Place, Conflict; Human Rights; Citizenship and Belonging) or an appropriate intersection. The seminar should bring together several Binghamton University Faculty with an invited senior scholar or scholars (up to 2) who is/are working in the thematic area of the proposed seminar. The seminar can take various formats. For example, it can center the participants’ contributions in the chosen thematic area or alternatively with the senior scholar as the commentator, or alternatively, it can center a discussion of the senior scholar contributions through participants’ commentary. Graduate and undergraduate students can be included by invitation.

2. A one day or more closed multidisciplinary “in-house” workshop that involve a small number of works-in-progress (chapters/articles) by the participants which are circulated in advance to all participants. The workshop should be in one of the TAE research theme areas (Movement, Place, Conflict; Human Rights; Citizenship and Belonging) or an appropriate intersection. It should bring together several Binghamton University Faculty who are working in the thematic area of the proposed workshop.

A proposal (no longer than 2 pages) should include:

- A seminar or workshop title
- The name(s) of the (co) organizers
- A description of the proposed seminar or workshop topic and how it addresses CRCB thematic areas across several disciplines
- A discussion of the proposed “work products” of the seminar or workshop (e.g. papers, book chapters, grants, websites)
  - For the seminar also
    - A list of potential senior scholars to be invited
    - A description of the envisaged format
- A list of already committed Binghamton University faculty participants including the organizer(s).
- A list of potential Binghamton University faculty participants culled from the TAE’s list or department websites.
- Approximate dates for the seminar or workshop
- A budget (and please specify how much you will need from the TAE and what you think you can get from other sources).

Please send proposals to ami@binghamton.edu.
