Manufacturing Internship – Summer 2016

International Paper (http://www.internationalpaper.com) is the world’s largest paper and forest products company. Primary businesses include paper, packaging and distribution related to a variety of end uses. International Paper is a Fortune 100 Company with operations around the globe.

We currently have one opening for a Manufacturing Intern at our Binghamton Container manufacturing plant in Conklin, NY. The facility manufactures corrugated packaging products for local and national customers.

We are looking for motivated individuals who have an interest in careers in manufacturing and are interested in hands on experience with a world class manufacturing company.

This position reports to the Manufacturing Manager and is to function as an active member of the team responsible for project work related to developing, implementing, and enhancing systems that improve the performance of manufacturing processes, with an emphasis on full customer satisfaction, safety and continuous improvement.

An intern experience at one of our manufacturing plants would include a process improvement project. The successful candidate, under the leadership of the project champion, will analyze, develop and implement improvement solutions. This will involve utilization of quality improvement processes and techniques as well as team facilitation and leadership skills. Each location will have specified projects and deliverables that will be established prior to the beginning of the intern experience.

In addition to project work, the successful candidate will work closely with the Manufacturing Manager on quality systems, reporting and analysis on product deviation, ensuring standardization of processes, and reducing plant variability. The incumbent will also participate in weekly manufacturing reliability meetings and follow-up on issues.

Qualified candidates will be pursuing a BS degree in manufacturing engineering or a related field. Candidates must have drive, initiative and a desire to work in a manufacturing setting. Successful candidates will have excellent communication skills, ability to interact with all levels of the organization, coursework or other experiences related to quality methodology, computer skills, strong analytical, problem solving and time management skills. Must be flexible around work schedule and have the ability to travel on an occasional basis. Candidates must be authorized to work in the United States.

International Paper offers a competitive salary of up to $16.15 per hour depending on experience. This is a great opportunity to start a career with a dynamic and proven manufacturer in the packaging industry.

Qualified candidates should express interest by applying online at www.internationalpaper.com.
